Fullerton

Is the gem of the Santa Ana Valley and is located on the Santa Fe railway twenty-three miles southeast of Los Angeles and is surrounded by the most fertile lands for miles in every direction, the soil being second to none in the State. The town is some 200 feet above the level of the sea and only fifteen miles from the Pacific Ocean. Fullerton while not over ten years old is the heaviest shipper of all kinds of fruits and farm products between Los Angeles and San Diego. Besides being a great farming region it is located adjoining the inexhaustible Puente oil belt, and the oil being piped to Fullerton gives this point a permanent advantage to manufacturers for cheap fuel. The population of this precinct is over 1000. It has a fine brick public and high school building, one weekly paper, one bank, and broad and clean streets
