LOS ALAMITOS

153

Los Alamitos

Is located on a branch of the Southern Pacific railroad some fourteen miles northwest from Santa Ana. It is the heart of the sugar beet section and the Los Alamitos Beet Sugar Factory is located here. This establishment alone distributes between $550,000 and $600,000 yearly among the farmers. The soil is a rich, deep, moist loam and perfectly adapted to the cultivation of a great variety of products without irrigation, most important among which is the sugar beet. The climate is mild and invigorating, and owing to the close vicinity of the ocean, some five miles distant, is cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter than cities further inland. The water for the land is obtained from artesian wells. A good school building and a fine new union church have just been completed.

164 NEWPORT BEACH

Newport Beach

Is the favorite seaside resort for the people of Santa Ana. There is a fine wharf where steamships can land freight and passengers. During the summer season this resort is crowded with tourists and pleasure-seekers. There are two fine hotels and numerous cottages. It is only ten miles southwest of Santa Ana, and is reached by the Santa Ana and Newport railroad. There is a long stretch of beautiful, sandy beach, very enjoyable to swimmers and bathers; a pretty bay, with pleasure boats; a pavilion for dancing; a public school and Methodist church. The climate is so delightful that it is a pleasant resort every month in the year.
