Westminster

is a small town some seven miles west of Santa Ana which city is its principal banking point. It is situated in the heart of a very rich farming country and adjacent to the celebrated Peatlands, which produce such enormous crops of corn, potatoes and various other vegetables. Celery is here grown and shipped by the carload. The price of land is very reasonable. The sugar beet industry is also an important factor. A railroad will soon be built to Westminster. Dairying is carried on extensively and two creameries are located here. The school facilities are first class and several churches are to be found here.
